Article IV – Areas of Dialogue Initiatives

Pertinent action by both Parties will include:

- (i) Development and dissemination of educational, cultural, and scientific content to foster the acceptance and recognition of cultural diversity, including multilingualism and religious beliefs;

Annex I contains detailed descriptions of these projects. All projects are planned to be completed by end 2010 or early 2011.

IV.2. Intensifying intercultural exchanges among youth

Intercultural exchanges between youth are an efficient part of the effort to overcome cultural barriers and to emphasize the value of intercultural awareness. The Parties are committed to joint efforts advocating for youth and student exchanges, cultural and artistic activities, as well as civic engagement projects, which are conducive to the promotion of intercultural understanding and respect for diversity. Initiatives considered under this area may include the following:

- (i) Collaboration for the promotion and expansion of the Global Youth Movement for the Alliance of Civilizations (GYMAOC) which seeks to mobilize and engage new participants and audiences in fostering knowledge and the practice of intercultural and interfaith dialogue, as well as to raise the visibility of young people's contribution to these objectives and to mobilize supporters for the Movement;

Founded on mutual respect and understanding, dialogue constitutes the best way to overcome ignorance and promote tolerance and peace. The media are in a strategic position to promote a broad-based dialogue when they have the necessary freedom and independence to do so. They have a vital role to play in shaping perceptions of other cultures and religions and therefore carry a unique responsibility for the promotion and acceptance of tolerance around the world.

Fostering an enabling environment that allows critical views to be broadcast and published, including those generated by minorities and other marginalized segments of society, will therefore be critical. Initiatives considered under this area may include the following:

- (i) Consolidation and expansion of the network of universities "UNESCO UNITWIN/ AoC Chairs on Media and Information Literacy for Intercultural Dialogue", linked to the UNESCO/AoC/European Commission inventory "Mapping World Media Education Policies" offering a framework for national, regional and international policies in this field;

ANNEX I

Ongoing projects funded by the Government of Spain

(1) "A scientific, philosophical, literary and artistic anthology of Muslim/Arab civilization and its contribution to the revival of Western philosophy and culture". The anthology (French, English, Arabic and Spanish) is designed as an educational tool – a kind of vademecum – for teachers, students, and the general public alike, presenting an intercultural vision of history that unites the Muslim/Arab world and the West.

(2) "A philosophical look at Muslim/Arab civilization: accounts of routes, encounters, bridges and dialogues". The project entails the production of educational tools that aim to illustrate instances of dialogue and exchanges within and through Muslim/Arab civilization. This material will present an intercultural vision of architecture and urbanism that links the Arab-Islamic and Western worlds, and highlights the exchanges and mutual influence, focusing on selected moments in time as well as on emblematic places and figures.

(3) "Illuminating Interrelations and Engaging Dialogues: Museums as a Civic Space for Developing Intercultural Skills". The project comprises two pilot activities: a) "Common Heritage: A museological and educational approach to researching the part played by others in a culture", in cooperation with museum(s) located in the Euro-Mediterranean region, and b) the design of an itinerary for a thematic visit to be included in the standard presentation of the museum.

(4) "Young Artists for Intercultural Dialogue between the Arab and Western Worlds". The project gives recognition to young artists for their creative achievement(s) (regardless of the nature of the art work) in favour of Arab/Western dialogue, in bestowing them with an honorary title of "Young artists for intercultural dialogue between Arab and Western worlds". The selection criteria are being formulated on the basis of UNESCO's experience with prizes and awards.

(5) "The Power of Peace Network: Reporting for Peace" (PPN). The PPN is an interactive platform that seeks to harness innovative mechanisms to promote peace through media and information and communication technologies. PPN fosters global collaboration in the use of the tools of information and communication for cultural self-expression, mutual understanding, the reduction of conflict incidents, and the support of sustainable living. In this framework the AoC initiative entitled "network of Dialogue cafés" may be taken into consideration.
